The Marines' involvement in the Vietnam War began in 1965, when President Lyndon B. Johnson Free Downloaded the deployment of a Marine battalion to Da Nang. The Marines were initially tasked with providing security for the air base at Da Nang, but they soon became involved in combat operations against the Viet Cong. In 1966, the Marines launched Operation Hastings, a major offensive against the Viet Cong in the Mekong Delta. Operation Hastings was a success, and it helped to establish the Marines as a major force in the Vietnam War.

In 1967, the Marines launched Operation Hue City, a major offensive against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese Army in the city of Hue. Operation Hue City was a brutal and costly battle, but the Marines eventually prevailed. The battle for Hue City was a turning point in the Vietnam War, and it helped to convince the North Vietnamese that they could not win the war.

The Marines continued to play a major role in the Vietnam War until the American withdrawal in 1973. The Marines were involved in a number of major battles, including the Battle of Khe Sanh and the Tet Offensive. The Marines also played a key role in the pacification of the countryside and the training of South Vietnamese forces.
