- Selling fresh, organic eggs

- Raising and selling meat chickens
- Breeding and selling purebred chickens
- Offering chicken-related services, such as egg-sitting or coop-cleaning

Selecting the Right Breed

The foundation of a profitable backyard chicken enterprise lies in selecting the appropriate breed. Consider the following factors:

- Egg production: Layer breeds like Leghorns and Rhode Island Reds are known for their high egg yield.
- Meat production: Broiler breeds like Cornish Crosses and Plymouth Rocks are renowned for their rapid growth and meat quality.
- Dual-purpose breeds: Wyandottes and Orpingtons offer a balance of both egg and meat production.

Building a Suitable Coop

Your chickens' well-being and productivity depend on a comfortable and secure coop. Plan for the following essential features:

- Adequate space: Allow at least 4 square feet per bird.
- Nesting boxes: Provide one box for every 3-4 hens.
- Ventilation: Ensure proper air circulation to prevent respiratory problems.
- Perches: Chickens instinctively roost at night, so provide elevated perches.
